

Guidelines for Virtual FVIP Trainings and Meetings

The Georgia Commission on Family Violence (GCFV) is conducting trainings and meetings virtually due to the pandemic. Although we are in a virtual environment, attendees are expected to conduct themselves as if it were an in-person training or meeting.

Attendees are required to have their cameras on and be present.

Prohibited activities include: working, driving, walking around, talking on the phone, eating and anything that is not related to the training or meeting.

If you are observed doing any of the prohibited activities, GCFV staff or the trainer will send you a private message, and if you continue to display the prohibited behavior, you will be removed from the session and will not receive credit for the session.

We understand that there will be moments when you may have to step away, if so, please let the GCFV staff person in the session know by sending a private message in the chat when you leave the session and when you return, and it will be noted. You should not be away from your computer with your camera off for more than 10 minutes.

If you cannot be present, do not register to attend the session or cancel in advance.

If you have any questions or concerns, please contact Jameelah Ferrell jameelah.ferrell@dcs.ga.gov.
