About the Conference

While substance use disorder does not cause family violence, there is a statistical correlation between the two issues. Studies of family violence frequently indicate high rates of alcohol and other drug use by perpetrators during abuse. The association between alcohol use and domestic violence has been well established by past research, and there is growing evidence that drug use is associated with domestic violence. The clearest evidence is that alcohol is a risk factor for family violence offending.

This training will review the most recent research on the coexistence of substance use, IPV and substance use coercion.

Finally, the training will address the issue of safety and sobriety in the treatment of both IPV and substance use disorders.

This training was approved by the Georgia Commission on Family Violence for 6 Training hours for FVIP facilitators. The views, findings, conclusions, and recommendations expressed in this training are those of the trainer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Georgia Commission on Family Violence.

Learning Objectives

1. Review the theoretical models of addiction and domestic violence
2. Review diagnostic criteria for substance use disorders.
3. Describe the relationship between addiction and family violence
4. Review the prevalence of substance use coercion, how often IPV and substance use coexist.
5. Examine the pitfalls of using 12-step language in family violence programs
6. Discuss safety and sobriety issues as it relates to substance use and family violence
7. Integrating substance abuse awareness into family violence intervention programs
